TASK 4 – Fiction

Read the story, “The Ring”, and answer questions 19 to 25.

The Ring

010
5 My father’s solemn eyes locked into mine. “Happy birthday, Son. The time has come. You are ready.” Without another word, he placed the titanium ring in my cold, right hand, turned like a soldier with precision and exited the room. As I slipped my long, skinny finger into the gleaming ring, an unnatural surge of power passed through my body.

10 “Wha... Wha... What’s happening?” I gasped and clenched my fist. In the blink of an eye, I found myself slammed against Dad’s massive bookcase. My heart lurched as the heavy, oak bookcase slowly started to topple towards me. Instinctively, I closed my eyes and pushed forward. As my index finger touched a shelf, I heard a bone-chilling creak, then silence. Slowly, I opened my left eye, then my right. The ceiling-high bookcase had returned to its original position with just a touch from my finger.

15 I glanced curiously at the ring, sparkling like a diamond. Why did Daddy say I was ready? Ready for what? He was never one to explain much. “You know more than you know,” he would always advise when I complained millions of times about what I could not do. I shook my head and wandered outside to let the mid-morning sun caress my face.

20 Suddenly, a thought flashed across my mind. I glanced around to see if I had witnesses, but all was serene in our gated community. I stared at the gleaming ring on my right hand, closed my eyes, raised my arms and jumped. In a nanosecond, I felt myself being flung towards the sky.

I opened my eyes to realise that my neighbourhood below was a village of Lego houses. I screamed as I zipped through a powder puff of clouds, zoomed past a flock of confused-looking birds and hitched a ride on the top of a cruising plane. I

25 reclined in my new position and gazed into the brilliant blue sky. Then, Daddy's voice echoed in my head, "You know more than you know, my son." I scrambled up with a sudden urge to return home. It was time to learn the truth.

I landed at the front porch with a soft thud, opened the front door and gasped. There was my entire family, radiant in red, white, and black costumes, each with 30 matching titanium rings and broad smiles on their faces. Daddy was the first to speak,

"Surprise, Son! Are you ready?"

A slow smile spread across my face as I walked into my new life.

TASK 5 – Poetry

Read the poem and answer questions 26 to 32.

There's a river in my bedroom, between the doorway and my bed,
Every morning, the same battle arises, all be it in my tiny head.
This river's mighty and infested with enormous, electric eels,
And ferocious hungry crocodiles, that'll tear me to shreds.

- 5 I throw off my cover, leaving the safety of my fortress,
I plan my escape route. In a leap, I spring off my mattress.
It's a well-calculated attack, like a tiger pouncing on its prey.
I must survive this familiar battle, to cross the river, this faithful Monday.

- At last! I've made it out safely but now a new battle must be fought!
10 Two faithful soldiers, Mr Toothbrush and Mrs Toothpaste,
Have stealthily taken up positions, in the bathroom fort.
This battle is short, in less than five minutes they're retreating with haste.

- "Hurry up! You'll be late," shouts the drill master, at the stairs,
I accept my kiss of victory and grab my prize, evidence she cares.
15 I cross the battlefield, as the chariot reaches the front gate,
To take me to another station, where a battle with new learning awaits.
